RESCUE CHARGE IDEA DROPPED

It has recently been confirmed that proposals for making people pay when H.M. Coastguards or other rescue services were called out to assist, particularly where negligence or irresposibility were involved, have now been dropped.

This is an issue which periodically raises its head, especially from the media, whenever a dramatic and costly rescue operation has to be mounted. Hopefully, members will continue to exercise their customary due caution and discretion, thus avoiding the liklihood of this hoary chestnut being revived in the future.
